Thanksgiving gives life to old and new traditions

By G. STEFAN SCHETSLEAAR
University Staff Writer

A cold chill is in the air. The colored leaves are falling from the trees. Snow begins to fall from the darkened sky. There is an atmosphere of excitement. All of these things mean Thanksgiving is just around the corner.

With the holiday comes many traditions, some are old and some are new. But they all mean Thanksgiving to those who enjoy them.

"Thanksgiving is a time when we all get together and enjoy each other's company," said Pam Crabb, a junior from Idaho Falls, Idaho, majoring in business. "Especially when we were kids, all of the relatives would come to our house to eat. Those are some of the best memories I have."

Thanksgiving means other traditional activities to other people.

"We go out to the walnut orchards and knock down the walnuts," said Mike Fontaine, a sophomore from Concord, Calif., majoring in marketing. "After we have them down, we sit in a circle and tell stories while we husk them. We all tell something that we are grateful for," he said.

"We all eat, and then the guys go out in the front yard and play basketball while the women stay inside and make a salad," said Donald Shaw, associate dean of the College of Physical Education.

"It's a tradition that we do almost every year," he said. "A different approach to Thanksgiving morning is taken by Jeff Chappell, a senior from Lyman, Utah, majoring in zoology.

"The guys in the family go out early in the morning on our annual hunting trip," he said.

"We go hunting geese and rabbits to kind of work up an appetite. The rest of the day we just lay around and watch football and eat."

Turkey is by far the most traditional thing about Thanksgiving. But other traditions exist with the food people eat.

Kelli Jensen, a junior from Houston, majoring in pre-physical therapy, said her family has a tradition that dates back a few years. "We have orange rolls on Thanksgiving. We've had those since I was a little girl, and they seem to get better every year," she said.

Thanksgiving is many things to many people. But what may stand out most in people's minds is the association enjoyed with families. Many students at BYU live too far from home to be able to return for the holiday. But they have alternatives that still make them happy.

"I'm going to my sister's house in Boise this year," said Bob Jensen, a junior from Cincinnati, majoring in media sales. "It would be great to be able to go home, but I guess it's just a bit far."

Harold Thompson, a senior from Monticello, Utah, majoring in zoology, summed Thanksgiving up well.

"We have to just get together and be a family again. Being thankful for the things we have and renewing the friendships that we have made Thanksgiving a very special holiday."

Explosion death toll continues to grow

Hundreds dead, injured in Mexico City

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Thousands of people whose homes were wiped out in a fiery gas explosion searched for relatives Tuesday morning. The Red Cross said 297 people were known dead and at least 500 were seriously injured.

About 20 square blocks in Tlalpan, a poor neighborhood on the northern edge of the capital, were flattened Monday morning by a dozen explosions at a gas storage complex run by Unigas Co. and Pemex, the government petroleum monopoly. Fireballs shot from the tanks of liquefied petroleum gas and fiery debris fell on the surrounding homes, incinerating many.

"The official figure we have is 297 deaths and we understand that eight (other) people died in hospitals during the night," said Commander Alejandro Barrios, a Red Cross duty officer in Mexico City.

Some homes nearest the explosion simply vanished, and the walls and roofs of others disappeared. The streets were littered with dead animals and blackened cars.

Officials said more than 100,000 people were evacuated from the area.

Outside one makeshift morgue survivors were lined up, and allowed to go in one at a time to identify victims. They had been left the bodies in the homes, because there it would have been easier for us to find them," he told reporters.

Several people fainted as they waited under the hot sun.

Many of the survivors made the rounds at hospitals looking for relatives and loved ones.

At the Social Security Institute's Medical Center, families waited for news of victims.

Miguel Perez and his wife, Engracia, waited for news of their niece, Mariela Ramero Granados, who was being treated for burns. Mrs. Perez said two of her niece's children were in another hospital, and that all three were in serious to critical condition.

"We looked for them all over. Other relatives looked for the children elsewhere. We finally found them all," Perez said.

Survivors were housed in refugee centers, such as the 18 de Marzo Sports Center, where 1,200 people spent the night. Tons of food and clothing poured in from throughout Mexico.

The army patrolled the blast area and arrested 20 looters who were trying to take advantage of the chaos. Soldiers refused to allow evacuees to return to their homes, or where their homes once stood, while the search for bodies continued.

In many cases, workers used jackhammers to break through piles of concrete rubble under which they expected to find more bodies.

Salvador Del Rio, a spokesman for Pemex, said Monday that preliminary reports indicated a gas truck exploded, touching off subsequent blasts at Unigas Co. distribution tanks and then at the adjoining Pemex reactor.

Pemex said its site was for storage and distribution of liquid petroleum gas, which is distributed mainly for cooking and heating in homes, offices and small factories.

Firefighters were still bringing the blast under control after more than seven hours Monday. On Tuesday there was only a flame from one of the tankers that was being allowed to burn itself out. Officials said there was no danger of additional explosions.

Economic growth rate slows in third quarter

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. economic growth from July through September slipped to 1.9 percent, the lowest since the last recession, the government said Tuesday, leaving analysts to debate whether the slow start threatens a new recession or is just a temporary lull.

The Commerce Department said the gross national product — the country's total output of goods and services — grew at a sluggish 1.9 percent during the third quarter.

This represented a marked drop from growth in the first half of the year, when the economy zoomed along at rates of 10.1 percent in the first half and 7.1 percent in the second quarter.

In another sign of economic weakness, the government said housing construction fell by 8.8 percent in October, putting starts at an annual rate of 1.8 million units, the lowest since December 1982.

The Reagan administration called the slowdown in growth temporary and predicted an upturn by the first of next year, but many private economists warned of rising unemployment and a growing threat of a recession.

The administration had been forecasting a rebound in growth to above 3 percent by the end of the third quarter. But last week administration economists said fourth quarter growth was likely to be below 3 percent.

The government announced that the interest rate ceiling on bank loans backed by the Veterans Administration will be trimmed to 12.6 percent from 13 percent Wednesday. The drop, which was announced last week, is the first time since August that V.A. mortgage rates have been lowered.

There has also been about a 2 percentage point drop in other interest rates since Labor Day brought about a easing in monetary policy by the Federal Reserve Board.

The slowdown in growth also had a negative impact on corporate profits in the third quarter. The Commerce Department said in a separate report that after-tax profits fell by 7.3 percent after a 0.3 percent fall in the second quarter.

The Commerce report blamed the third quarter GNP decline primarily on a drop in consumer spending and the country's worsening trade deficit.

While personal consumption spending was advancing at an annual rate of 7.8 percent in the second quarter, that increase had slowed to 6.6 percent in the third quarter.

But foreign imports increased at an annual rate of 55.5 percent in the third quarter, compared with an 8 percent pace in the second quarter. U.S. sales were also up, but at a much slower rate of 8.8 percent compared to a decline of 0.5 percent in the second quarter. The high dollar has been blamed for what will be the country's worst trading year in history.

The 1.9 percent growth rate in the third quarter was a revision from an estimate based on preliminary data last month of 2.7 percent.

Students will face $40 tuition increase in '85-'86 school year

Tuition has increased almost every year during the past decade, and the Board of Trustees of BYU approved a tuition increase of $40 per semester for the 1985-'86 school year.

"Inflation is still with us and we have to compensate, however, the average increase in previous years has been over nine percent," said Paul C. Richards, director of Public Communications.

"This year's increase is only 6.7 percent and we are pleased that the percentage is coming down."

Effective Sept. 1, the new rate will be $740 per semester.

"The increase is necessary to keep pace with rising operational costs in an inflationary economy and to avoid imposing an increasing financial burden on the title-payers of the LDS Church," said President Jeffrey R. Holland.

Graduate tuition will also increase. Graduate and advanced standing student's tuition will increase from $800 to $850, or 6.3 percent.

Law School tuition will increase from $1,390 to $1,590, or 14.4 percent.

The larger increase for the management students is part of a long-range plan to equalize tuition in BYU's professional schools.

Students who are not members of the LDS Church pay one and a half times the regular tuition rate.

SLC could be host of 1996 Olympics

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A growing number of boosters are pressing government officials to make a strong bid to bring the 1996 Winter Olympic Games to Utah in 1996.

But opponents say the Games could bring drastic changes in Utah's character, income, environment and quality of life.

Hosting the world's largest and most prestigious winter sports competition would impact nearly every Wasatch Front hamlet, town and city.

The fears are that the event would create huge transit problems and overwhelm the area's infrastructure.

The Wasatch Front's sensitive canyon environments, and the possibility of taxpayers being stuck with Olympic debt. The cost of holding the 1996 Winter Games easily could top $400 million.

But the profitability and overall success of the 1984 Los Angeles Summer Games could be a selling point, local boosters say.

"The Olympics have a very great potential for a state or city, totally changing it," warned Alex Kellner, a Sierra Club member and Salt Lake City's unsuccessful bid to host the 1996 Winter Games. Those Games were awarded to Denver, but ultimately were held in Innsbruck, Austria.

"I think that, at the moment, you've had a hard time finding a better place to hold an Olympics," countered an enthusiastic A. Colin Jackson, president of Snowbird Development Co.

Comparisons with Innsbruck come easily. The Austrian city and Utah's capital have topography, skiing conditions and close proximity to ski slopes in common.

Salt Lake City Mayor Ted Wilson said he'd be like the area to become Olympic host if the various costs don't get too great.

Academy buyer plans renovation

By JAY RUYBALD

A Provo resident and well-known author has purchased the historic Provo Academy Square for future renovation and preservation as a cultural center and office complex.

Local businessman Robert G. Allen, made the announcement at a press conference Tuesday afternoon. Allen said the building was purchased for $1.4 million from Security Agencies Ltd. of Canada.

There had been speculation the building would be torn down after the Provo City Council made a decision to locate a planned city library near the city center, instead of in the Academy Square building.

However, many legitimate offers were made to the previous owners before Allen's offer was accepted, according to the seller's spokesman Myrie Astroppe. Reportedly, the previous owners turned down higher offers for the property because Allen's intentions for the building were more commercial focused.

Our main goal for Academy Square was to preserve the structure," Astroppe said. "We feel the community deserves to have the buildings preserved, and we feel the Allen Group will do just that."

The Allen Group is an educational firm based in Provo. It has developed educational programs taught to more than 40,000 people each year in seminars and conferences across the United States. Allen is chairman of the group and his brother Brian is president.

Allen vowed he would restore the building. "It will cost a lot of money, but it will be done right."

In an unprecedented decision, the Utah Wildlife Board adopted year-round fishing for 1985.

The five-member citizen board has voted unanimously to adopt new regulations proposed by the Utah Division of Wildlife Resources, including opening most Utah waters to fishing year-round.

Year-round fishing will greatly increase fishing opportunities for Utahns while decreasing fishing pressure throughout the year, according to Bill Geisinger, director for the Division of Wildlife Resources.

In addition, Utah fisheries managers are preparing an entirely new format for the fishing regulations.

The 1985 Fishing Proclamation will be in newspaper tabloid format with a map, game regulations and specific area regulations on special waters. An individual will simply check the general regulations, then refer to the area section where their favorite fishing water is located, to determine if the regulations keep the right trout bag limit year-round with some exceptions. In northern Utah (Caché, Weber, Morgan and Davis counties) the winter limit on rivers and streams will be four trout; limit on lakes and reservoirs will remain at eight. Salt Lake area rivers and streams will have a two-trout limit during the winter.

At a Tuesday press conference, Robert G. Allen, left, announced he had purchased the Academy Square building for $1.4 million. Spokesman Stan Miller said more specific plans for the Academy will be announced later.

He added he could find it personally if he also falls. Allen said he caught the spirit of the building while attending a play there. "We are interested in restoring the building to its deserved dignity," he explained. "Academy Square holds a great deal of history for the Provo community, and we want to preserve that heritage."

Part of the funds necessary for renovation of the buildings will be provided by the Brigham Young Academy Foundation, formerly Friends of the Academy, Allen said. "They have the resources to develop an exciting community center, so we are providing the space for them to do that. We want to make the buildings a focal point of pride in the community, as they deserve to be."

The majority of the space in the planned renovation will likely be used as office space, rather than retail or shopping space, according to spokesman Stan Miller. More specific plans for the renovation and the community cultural center will be announced by Allen and the Brigham Young Academy Foundation in the near future, he said.

Utah adopts a year-round fishing season

In an unprecedented decision, the Utah Wildlife Board adopted year-round fishing for 1985.

The five-member citizen board has voted unanimously to adopt new regulations proposed by the Utah Division of Wildlife Resources, including opening most Utah waters to fishing year-round.

Year-round fishing will greatly increase fishing opportunities for Utahns while decreasing fishing pressure throughout the year, according to Bill Geisinger, director for the Division of Wildlife Resources.

In addition, Utah fisheries managers are preparing an entirely new format for the fishing regulations.

The 1985 Fishing Proclamation will be in newspaper tabloid format with a map, game regulations and specific area regulations on special waters. An individual will simply check the general regulations, then refer to the area section where their favorite fishing water is located, to determine if the regulations keep the right trout bag limit year-round with some exceptions. In northern Utah (Caché, Weber, Morgan and Davis counties) the winter limit on rivers and streams will be four trout; limit on lakes and reservoirs will remain at eight. Salt Lake area rivers and streams will have a two-trout limit during the winter.

These reduced winter limits are necessary on the low elevation streams that generally have good use of high fishing pressure.

Board member Jerry Little remarked, "Winter fishing should provide a season of sport, not one of harvest. It's a recreational experience rather than simply filling the frater."

One controversial issue dominated discussions of the board and citizens attending the meeting — the Green River Basin Planning Group. The Board heard comments from the public at two public meetings in September during a comment period in October and at a meeting Nov. 9.

Dr. Hugh Hodge, board member from Salt Lake City, proposed to adopt the DWR recommendation saying, "We are voting the recommendation that if we deviate from the proposed regulations this late in the decision process." Fishing on the Green River will be permitted year-round with artificial flies and flies only. The bag limit will be two trout over 13 inches and one over 20 inches.

A major concern addressed by the board centers around the proposed license fee increase and year-round fishing.

Wildlife Board Chairman Warren Harwood summarized the concern for fishing. "I hope that you gentlemen have the time to talk to your legislators regarding this license increase." The Utah Legislature will determine license fees when it meets.

According to temple president Leonard F. Friday, the temple will reopen Friday and Saturday on the regular schedule.

He extended an invitation to families and visiting groups interested in visiting the temple.

Unlocked doors result in burglaries

Burglars gained access to a home and a car through unlocked doors in two incidents under investigation in Provo this week.

An unlocked sliding glass door enabled a burglar to make off with a purse containing $500 cash from an apartment at 3228 N. Canyon Road.

Provo Police Capt. Max Littlefield said the victims thought the burglary happened Friday, but did not notice the loss until Sunday.

Aside from the money, a checkbook, credit cards and personal identification were reported missing.

Littlefield said the automobile burglary took place outside Provo High School when a woman placed her purse on the floor of her car and left the car unlocked while in the school for a few minutes.

Although the purse was at least partially under the seat, the victim found her personal identification and $270 in food stamps missing. Littlefield said.

'Music at Midday' feast for the ears

At today's Music at Midday, music by Marcel Blitch, Earl Hatch, Chopin and Beethoven will be featured.

Jeff Grundberg, a sophomore from Prescott, Ariz., majoring in trumpet performance, will perform Blitch's "Quatre Variations sur un Thema de Domenico Scarlatti" on his trumpet.

"Surtoso and Valse in D Minor," by Hiltz, will be played on the marimba by Keesly Wolsey, a freshman from Provo majoring in music.

Chorine "Bellied in F Minor, Op. 52" will be performed on the piano by Dwight Blatz, a senior from Castro Valley, Calif., majoring in piano performance.

Beethoven's "Sonata in D Major, Op. 10, #3" will also be performed by Blatz.

Olympians banned from future events

TOKYO (AP) — When five Japanese swimmers dabbled in marijuana, it caused more than just a ripple. Not only were they banned from future competition, the head of Japan's Amateur Swimming Federation and five coaches resigned to accept some of the blame.

The disciplinary actions against the swimmers, four of whom were members of Japan's Olympic team, emphasized the seriousness with which drug use, even of a minor nature, is viewed in Japanese society.

According to police, the Olympians — including Shinji Ito, who set new national records in the 200- and 400-meter medley events in the Los Angeles Summer Games, smoked marijuana while in Los Angeles and brought 10 grams back to Japan, where three of them shared the pot with a fifth swimmer.

In addition to being banned from competition, police said, the four swimmers face possible indictment on charges of smuggling and possession of the illegal substance.

Conviction on such charges can lead to a maximum prison term of seven years.

Teenager shot by opposing fan

MIAMI (AP) — A high school sophomore who was "very remorseful" confessed to firing shots that killed a 14-year-old boy during a bus fight with rivalry football fans, police and school officials said.

The 16-year-old suspect, whose identity was not released because of his age, was charged Monday with second-degree murder and was expected to appear at a preliminary hearing before a juvenile judge, said police spokesman Reginald Roundtree.

John H. Peavy, assistant principal at Northwestern High School, said the teenager was "very remorseful" over the death of Leonard Williams, an eighth-grader at Allapattah Junior High School.

Northeastern defeated rival Miami Jackson High School 41-0 Friday in a football game at the Orange Bowl. Williams and a friend were among a few Jackson fans who boarded a Metro bus filled with Northwestern fans.

Massive manhunt ends in success

NEW YORK (AP) — The largest and most successful manhunt in U.S. history, spanning eight states and including four undercover elings, has led to the capture of 3,309 fugitives.

Attorney General William French Smith said Tuesday.

The joint two-month effort was coordinated by the U.S. Marshals Service, with participation by officers from more than 50 other federal, state and local agencies along the Eastern Seaboard.

Those apprehended by the 225-member task force were named in 5,600 felony warrants, ranging from first-degree murder and rape to narcotics, weapons and robbery charges, according to Marshals Service Director Stanley E. Morris.

Family and career mix well for hospital administrator

By RUSSELL MATTHEWS

It is possible for a woman to have a satisfying career and be a successful mother if she manages her time, sets distinct priorities and pursues interests in the proper season, the wife of a BYU professor said.

Employed at Cottonwood Hospital in Salt Lake City, Virginia Wright works in administrative management with responsibilities in strategic planning.

"I am not a woman's libber, and I am not rebelling against any traditional roles of women," said Virginia Wright, wife of Dr. Dale Wright, director of the graduate health administration program in the School of Management.

Wright would not be able to do all the things she does were it not for the cooperative support from all the members of her family.

"My family is always first priority, and at times I have had to sit down with my husband to make decisions as to what is most important," Wright said.

She said managing her calendar is important in organizing her time. If she finds she is not spending enough time with members of her family, she will either take the afternoon off or bring her work home.

"My husband has always supported me in my endeavors. I have time to go out with him and do my church responsibilities," she said, and contribute to society in a different way.

"I am still traditional. I love my family, and I wouldn't change that for anything in the world," Wright said.

She returned to college and in 1981 received her master's degree in public administration.

Upon graduation, Wright served an administrative residency at Holy Cross Hospital in Salt Lake City and later went to work at Cotton-

Thanksgiving a feast of love, not just food

By LESLIE JAMES
Universe Staff Writer

It is through sharing that people most eloquently express Thanksgiving to Heavenly Father, said John B. Stohli at BYU's traditional Thanksgiving devotional assembly.

Stohli, assistant executive vice president of auxiliary services at BYU, stressed the importance of observing Thanksgiving. He said it is a symbol of the greatest that the holiday has lost much of its spiritual flavor.

Thanksgiving is too often celebrated through "consumption rather than spiritual feasts of love, gratitude and sharing," Stohli said. "We have lost the custom of sharing the blessings of God's providence with those who are in need."

This lack of true spiritual basis for the holiday hasn't always been, Stohli said. The first Thanksgiving was celebrated by the pilgrims in the fall of 1621.

About half of Plymouth's original 101 settlers died during the severe winter of 1623. Those who survived had to learn how to make a life in the harsh new land, he said.

They were rewarded for their diligence by reaping a bounteous harvest in the fall of 1621. A grateful Gov. Bradford proclaimed a three-day period of fasting and celebrations to celebrate the successful harvest. This started the tradition of Thanksgiving.

Stohli said the first and many subsequent celebrations of Thanksgiving focused upon man's relationship and dependence on his Heavenly Father.

When George Washington established the 1789 Thanksgiving celebration, he proclaimed, "It is the duty of all nations to acknowledge the providence of almighty God, to obey his will, to be grateful for his benefits . . . that we may then all unite in rendering unto him our sincere and humble thanks for his kind care and protection of the people of this country."

Thanksgiving is the essence of the gospel of Jesus Christ," Stohli said. Even the most cursory reading of the scriptures should prove this.

King Benjamin clearly taught of its importance when he stressed to his people, "Oh how you ought to thank your heavenly King! I say unto you, my brethren, that if you should render all the thanks and praise which your whole soul has power to possess, to that God who has created you, and has kept you preserved you, and has caused that ye should live in peace one with another . . . ye would be unprofitable servants."

"As we plan our Thanksgiving celebrations," Stohli said, "we should contemplate the blessings we enjoy."

LDS Church joins nation's efforts to help Ethiopia

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints has joined ranks with other organizations to aid famine-stricken Ethiopia, officials said.

Ethiopia, burdened by drought causing millions to starve, can expect relief from the LDS Church in the form of monetary contributions. The funds will be appropriated from donations by members of the church and contributed to an international relief agency, said Glenn L. Pace, managing director of welfare services.

"At the direction of the First Presidency and the Presiding Bishopric we are contributing through an international relief agency with the stipulation that the money be used to buy food for those people in Ethiopia who have the greatest need and for use in transporting available food to them," Pace said.

Contributions for Ethiopia will come from the church's fast offering funds.

Church officials did not release the amount of money being contributed nor the extent of time the contributions will continue, although the church did request a report on how the contributions are being used.

Officials of the church did not name the relief agency through which they will contribute the funds, to avoid singling out one of the number of reputable organizations involved in the relief effort.

Those members who want to do more are encouraged to do so, said Don LaFevre, manager of press relations. The church does not want to influence a member's choice of an agency by "singling it out."

The contributions are part of an effort to relieve Ethiopia's starving population, one million of whom are expected to die of famine this year, according to a recent report in Newsweek magazine.

Hawaiian volcano roars back to life

VOLCANO, Hawaii (AP) — A cloud-shrouded Kilauea Volcano roared back to life Tuesday, shooting lava 1,000 feet into the air and sending out a river of molten rock more than a mile in the first eight hours, scientists reported.

The start of 27th phase of the eruptive cycle that began Jan. 3, 1983, was recorded at 12:05 a.m., breaking a nearly three week silence since the previous activity at the Pu'u Ovent in the volcano's East Rift Zone, said Tom Wright, the scientist in charge of the U.S. Geological Survey's Volcano Observatory.

The major lava flow extending to the east from the riftway poses no immediate threat to any property, Wright said. "It would have to go a long way before it could threaten any problem," he said.

A second, much shorter flow was moving to the northeast, also posing no threat, Wright said.

The 26th eruptive phase occurred Nov. 2, lasting about five hours. Wright said he could not predict how long the current fountain would last. "We just don't know. These things shut off just like blowing out a candle."

A team of scientists at the eruption site reported they could catch only periodic views of the fountain because of the low cloud cover, Wright said.

Safety commission begins campaign for toy safety

WASHINGTON (AP) — As the holiday season nears, the government Tuesday added a new caveat to an old warning — let the buyer beware of toys that could pose a threat to the safety of children.

"Consumers make the difference" was the message as the Consumer Product Safety Commission launched its fourth annual holiday toy safety campaign, complete with balloons, festive music, Santa Claus and colorfully wrapped gift boxes containing Michael Jackson dolls for about a half-dozen school children.

Sixteen children died and 118,000 others were injured in toy-related accidents in 1983, according to CPSC figures. A year earlier, toys were involved in 17 deaths and 123,000 injuries.

The commission chairman, Nancy Harvey Steorts, said the downward trend was "encouraging" but that the number is "still too high."

Declaring that a majority of the toys in the marketplace are safe, she said, "The most common type of accident occurred not because there was anything wrong with the toy, but because the toy was not being used safely."

"Most of the injuries are from misuse and a lack of supervision," she said. Steorts advised parents to read the labels on toys to make sure they are right for the child's age. A toy designed for a 5-year-old, for example, could have small parts that pose a choking hazard to a 2-year-old.

She issued a specific warning about balloons, noting that over the last 10 years, balloons have been involved in the deaths of more than 80 children. Balloons that are inflated or popped pose a choking hazard to young children, Steorts said.

Steorts said the commission staff was "constantly monitoring" the marketplace in search of unsafe toys. But she also asked consumers to ask the commission any questions they might have about the safety of a particular toy.

Commissioner Terence M. Scanlon said $4 billion in toys would be sold between Thanksgiving and Christmas.

All told, 1.7 billion toys were sold last year, according to Douglas Thompson, president of the Toy Manufacturers of America.

He said the decrease in the number of toy-related injuries indicates "real progress."

The commission said that when shopping for an infant or a toddler, consumers should avoid toys with little parts or long strings that shoot or propel objects. As a rule of thumb, Scanlon said, the base of expensive toys should be no smaller than the child's fist.

The BYU football squad is the No. 1 ranked team in the nation.

That may be the most amazing statement ever printed in The Daily Universe. For a school that is far from America's media centers, has a winning tradition that stretches back slightly more than a decade and has been overlooked in the polls for several years to be No. 1 is just slightly short of miraculous.

"If someone had told me at the beginning of the season we'd be No. 1, I'd have said, 'This year'," said Cougar linebacker Leon White. "It's a surprise. I really didn't think we'd get the chance."

"In past years, we were just happy to be in the Top Twenty," said center Trevor Matich. "Last year, we wanted to be in the Top 10."

"This year, we'll be disappointed if we don't finish No. 1."

The Cougars' top priority now is to hang on to their ranking.

"We're real happy about being No. 1 — now we just have to keep it," White said.

The Cougars aren't counting on anything, and realize they still have to get past Utah State and win the Holiday Bowl to have a chance of winning the national championship.

"We're excited, but we've got two games to go," Matich said. "We'll be ready for them."

Incredibly, everything has fallen into place for BYU to make it to the top spot. Of course, the Cougars have done their part — they're riding a 20-game winning streak and are 11-0 this season.

But a lot of other things have worked out to BYU's advantage. The boys in blue are the only undefeated team in major college football.

"When you think about it, if any other team was undefeated they'd be No. 1," said backup quarterback Blaine Fowler. "It's kind of scary."

"Everything just worked out," Fowler said. "A lot of teams had to lose for us to get here."

Upset losses by Nebraska and South Carolina made room for the Cougars at the top, but those weren't the only two games that went BYU's way.

Syracuse's stunning win over Nebraska, Houston's surprising defeat of Texas, Kansas' shocking upset of Oklahoma and USC's triumph over Washington are just a few of the matchups that allowed BYU to become America's team.

"It's got to be meant to be," Fowler said.

ROTC trains with laser beams

Y cadets learn modern warfare
By GINA R. MARCUCCI COX
Universe Staff Writer

The Multiple Integrated Laser Engagement System provides realistic training by allowing soldiers to shoot the "enemy" with a laser beam. BYU ROTC cadets have learned.

ROTC cadets from BYU traveled to Fort Irwin, Calif., to participate in "Operation Desert Warrior" Nov. 9 to 11.

"The cadets were dressed as Soviet aggressors in the exercise which featured individual, crew and vehicle-mounted weapons that utilized MILES," said Maj. William F. Pratt, an assistant professor of military science.

Fort Irwin is the home of the $380 million national training center, which uses MILES to monitor every aspect of military maneuvers, he said.

The training center has video equipment mounted at different locations to provide a close-up view of battle, Pratt said. Computers record and transmit the exact location and movement of each vehicle to the center.

Radio communications between commanders and their soldiers are recorded to expose strengths and weaknesses of communications during a battle.

The purpose of the training center is to be able to study a battle over a large area, Pratt said.

The sister element of the national training center is Opposing Forces (OPFOR).

The OPFOR's mission is to provide a simulated Soviet fighting force that can challenge the United States forces, he said. OPFOR studies Soviet doctrine in land warfare.

The BYU cadets were invited to participate in an exercise as Soviet soldiers. They were taught Soviet doctrine and learned how to use Soviet weapons.

Rebecca Wood, an ROTC cadet from Newport, R.I., practices warfare maneuvers. The cadets recently participated in an exercise dressed as Soviet aggressors at Fort Irwin, Calif.

emerging high technology in the army is used to rub shoulders with America's best trained soldiers." The goal of the OPFOR is to be able to combat any Soviet-style force and survive, Pratt said.

Light ceremony will kick off Provo Christmas activities

By JULIE A. HOPKINS
Universe Staff Writer

Provo's double-decker bus will begin running on Thanksgiving, and downtown Provo will have its lighting ceremony Friday to celebrate the beginning of the city's Christmas activities.

The lighting ceremony will begin at 6 p.m. at Tabernacle Park in Provo. Stores will stay open until 9 p.m. that evening.

The double-decker bus will shuttle people between BYU campus and downtown Provo Monday through Saturday. The bus will run from Thanksgiving to Christmas day, two times each hour, stopping at the Mission Training Center, Heritage Hall, the Harris Fine Arts Center parking lot and Provo Town Square.

Several Provo merchants are sponsoring the first Provo City Christmas Lighting Contest.

Judging of the lights will be based on color, theme and originality. The grand prize winner will receive a $25 credit toward their power bill. First and second prize winners will receive gift certificates to local restaurants.

All residents interested in entering someone else must have their nomination to their neighborhood chairman or the Provo Mayor's office by Dec. 10.

Will Feller, president of the Merchants Association of Provo Chamber of Commerce, said, "We are including 10 strands of Christmas lights in a promotional packet for the merchants participating in our downtown Christmas activities this year."

He said there should be more lights on the buildings and trees this year. Last Christmas 10 Provo business people bought the British double-decker bus in Denver. Brad Nelson, mechanic and driver, said the bus was recently overhauled to put it in good condition for winter. "We tore the engine apart and rebuilt it totally," he said.

Several years ago the Civic Improvement Division of the Chamber of Commerce began to obtain lights to put on Provo's downtown trees. In 1983, Provo Town Square managers put similar lights on their commercial buildings, including the historic storefronts.

The City Power Department provided equipment to string the lights and Provo Town Square supplied labor and materials.

"Last year was bitter cold the night after Thanksgiving when we had the candlelight procession and light ceremony," he said. "We were all freezing, but when those lights went on the crowd just came alive with enthusiasm."

Prepare your car for travel with an OilWell oil transfusion

Your car's life blood is its oil. If it is changed often (every 3 thousand miles or 3 months) with a new filter you may extend the life of your car by thousands of miles and years of service.

When it is not changed regularly the dirty oil no longer protects and lubricates the way it used to, but allows much more friction and eventual engine problems.

Let OilWell help you care for your car and prevent possible engine problems due to old dirty oil.

OilWell uses quality Pennzoil lubricants and filters. Full Service for $20.95 includes an oil change, oil filter, complete lube, check the air filter, check and fill: brake fluid, battery, power steering, transmission, windshield washer, differential, and vacuum your car along with a car wash.

An oil change of up to 5 quarts including an oil filter is only $15.95. Do your car a favor and come in soon for an oil change. OilWell cares for your car.

LIFESTYLE

Temple Square to don 215,000 lights

Salt Lake City's historic Temple Square will be aglow with some 215,000 tiny pastel lights as the Christmas season gets underway with Temple Square's traditional lighting ceremony on Friday.

Elder M. Russell Ballard, a member of the presidency of the First Quorum of Seventy of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, will deliver a brief message at the Christmas lighting ceremony, which begins at 6:30 p.m. on the plaza of Temple Square's North Visitor's Center.

Following Elder Ballard's remarks, the brass ensemble of the Mormon Youth Symphony will perform Christmas music.

The lights will be turned on at the conclusion of the brief service, and will be on display until 11 p.m. Jan. 1.

The ceremony will inaugurate more than five weeks of special holiday activities on the walled-in, downtown square, according to Marvin L. Fugh, Temple Square director.

Among the Christmas festivities will be two Mormon Tabernacle Choir concerts under the direction of Leavel D. Ottley.

The choir will also perform on its regular Sunday network radio and television program at 9:30 a.m., and the public is invited to choir rehearsals on Thursdays, beginning at 7:30 p.m.

The traditional performance of Handel's "Messiah" by the Oratorio Society of Utah is another festivity and will take place Dec. 15 and 16 at 8 p.m. Tickets will be necessary to attend this performance.

The Mormon Youth Symphony and Chorus, directed by Robert C. Bowden, will also be performing Dec. 7 and 8, at 8 each night.

"Mr. Krueger's Christmas," a movie starring Jimmy Stewart, will also be showing continually in the North Visitors Center.

'Mary, Mary' airy comment on marriage

By LAUREN'A. MACHEK
Universe Staff Writer

"Mary, Mary," a light comedy about marriage and how a family is "put back together" by the Internal Revenue Service will open Thanksgiving Day at 8 p.m. in the Pardoe Drama Theater.

The play begins as Mary and Bob call it quits on their marriage. Uncle Sam, however, will not leave them alone. The couple is thrown back together to do battle with the Internal Revenue Service.

The play has a subtle sugar and spice humor in the vein of Erma Bombeck, but not so bold," explained director Jean Jenkins. "It talks about marriage in a subconscious message, but its purpose is to entertain. 'Mary, Mary' is somewhat predictable, but it's charming in its simplicity and delightful in characterization."

Jenkins selected "Mary, Mary" because she sees a universal need for people to laugh. "I wanted to do something just for fun, to give people an evening's entertainment," she said.

All the characters in "Mary, Mary" are nice people, according to Jenkins. "There isn't a villain among them—the audience will like them and wish they were the people next door."

When casting for the play, Jenkins auditioned approximately 70 actors and actresses before choosing the final five.

Jenkins looks for students who are most qualified for the part and tries to avoid any precasting.

When casting students, Jenkins tries to create contrast between characters. For example, to contrast with her red-headed female lead, she wanted a dark male counterpart.

In addition to contrast, Jenkins likes to expand the development of her cast players. In "Mary, Mary," Randy King appeared naturally comfortable in the role of Oscar, the lawyer. Instead, Jenkins placed him in the lead role to help him gain experience.

Jenkins also searches for an innate sense of humor when casting for a comedy. She believes the performer who is comically predisposed can portray the role most credibly and efficiently.

Jenkins, a professor of theater and cinematic arts, has directed BYU productions such as "The Admirable Crichton," "Anastasia," and "The Marriage-Go-Round." She is best known, however, for her one-woman shows and interpretive readings, which she presents across the United States.

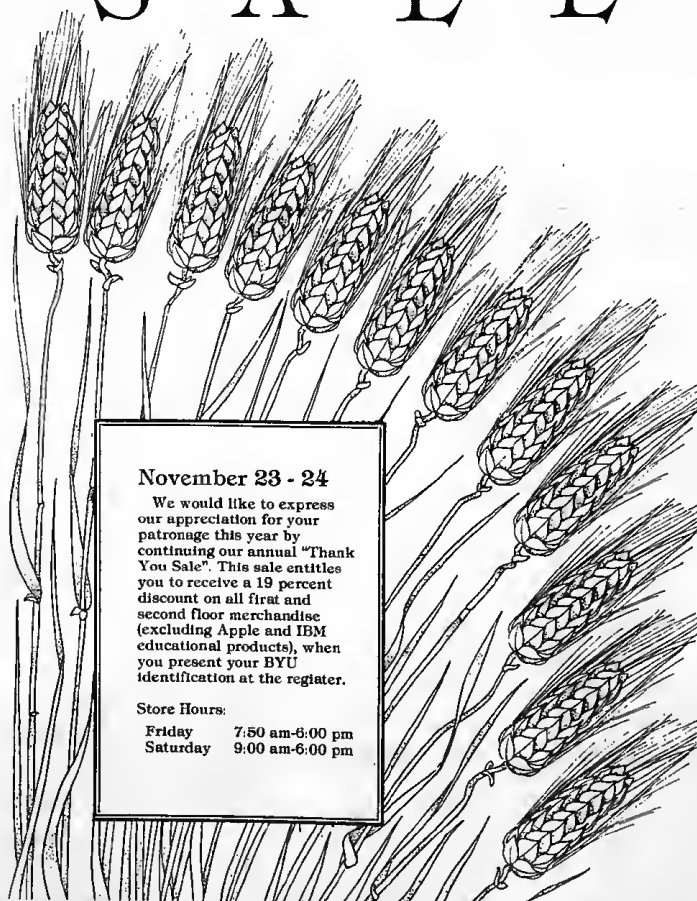

The stars of "Mary, Mary" will be BYU students King, Laurie Harrop, Gary Inesh, Tammy Hughes and Greg Barber. Charles Henson designed the set and Janet Swenson designed the costumes.

"Mary, Mary" will be showing the Pardoe Drama Theater, HFAC. Additional performances will be Friday, Saturday and Monday and into December. Tickets are available at the theater ticket office.

Lariats, ropes will be popular

NEW YORK (AP)—Necklaces will come in all lengths this spring, says Kae McCulloch, fashion director of the Jewelry Industry Council. Among the styles expected to be popular are collars, choikers, lariats, open-lengths and ropes, along with the current "twisters"—several strands in one necklace with mixes of gold, pearls and beads.
